Choir Festival Held At Galilee

An unusually large crowd attended the choir festival held at the Galilee Baptist Church last Sunday evening at 7:30. Mrs. Bertha King served as mistress of ceremony. The following church choirs appeared on the program: Mount Airy Gospel Lights, Jordan Baptist Church Sr. Choir, Sulphur Spring Baptist Church Sr. Choir, Chestnut Grove Church Sr. Choir, Mount Zion Church Jr. Choir and the Fork Union Baptist Church choir. Each group rendered two of its favorite selection. The devotionals were conducted by the Galilee Sr. Choir, sponsor of the program. The welcome address was given by Mrs. Dorothy Pannell and the response was given by Deacon Scott of the Sulphur Spring Church. The general offering was taken by Deacons Clinton Venable of Mount Zion, and J. W. Seay, of Fork Union. The total amount taken was $69.70. Mr. Taft Statem, of Baltimore, Md. played during the offering period and rendered a special solo that was enjoyed by all. The pastor of the church gave the closing remarks and the benediction.

A large crowd attended the annual Womans Day program of the Mount Shiloh Baptist Church last Sunday evening at 3p. m. The program was sponsored by the Willing Workers Club of the church. How Two Men Died

Lesson for March 22, 1964

Death came to three men on the same afternoon. We cannot say that "as it must to all men, death came to these," for the three died by cruel violence. They died, in fact, by being executed. It was a form of death that was meted out only to the most degraded of men—traitors, slaves, the worst of criminals. The punishment was crucifixion. We have been so long accustomed to glamorized pictures of the cross that we forget how horrible it was. Naked men were fastened with nails to their crosses. No fatal blow was struck, the men were just left to die. Gradual loss of blood would bring on a torturing thirst, and death was slow in coming. Victims often took two or three days to die, and most men would pray hours before the end came.

Death Without Hope

The two men crucified to the right and left of Jesus were marked as bad men, and would be considered dangerous in any country at any time. They were not "thieves" in the 20th century meaning of that word. The Greek word for them means robber, bandit. They were the kind of men who do not hesitate to commit murders in order to rob their victims. The police and the public breathe more easily when such men are executed.

One of these men died as he had lived, his hand against every man's. Hung up there to die, he kept his bitter heart to the end. Whoever had condemned him to be crucified was not now out there in the crowd. This robber hated people without reason. So he turned against Jesus and picking up what the mob was shouting, he spoke mocking words to the dying Jesus. Ridicule can hurt more deeply than harsh words and curses. The bandit's partner on the other side joined for a while in the jeers Matthew and Mark both recall that the two men taunted Jesus) but changed his mind. this bandit kept his bitterness and died in it.

Death Under a Promise

The other victims were just as dead, when sunset came, as this angry outcast. But they came to their end in a quite different way. Consider the other bandit. He was just as bad a man as his partner on the far cross: he admitted guilt for both of them, acknowledged that what they suffered, they deserved. Somehow he knew that the man on the central cross did not belong there. Whether this bandit had ever heard of Jesus, or seen him before we do not know. But criminal though he was, he had a clearer insight into the situation than all the high priests. He has done nothing wrong, he said. And then he says a strange thing to Jesus. Remember me when you come in your kingdom, he said.

Jesus answers the faith with a promise: Today you will be with me in Paradise. Just as simple as making a lunch date. And that promise he died, not in bitterness like his partner in crime, but in hope and faith. Christians from then to now die as other men die, yet not as other men in spirit. For every Christian dies under a promise: "I am the Life."

The Hour of Hope

All sorts of gloomy things are said about death, and we are supposed to feel bitter about it. But Christians know better. Grace Noll Crowell wrote a poem about death, and she called it "This is His Night." Saint Paul, first Christian to put on record his thoughts about death, calls it a departure —going to "be with the Lord." Death is not merely what so many millions think it is, the end of all things. It is the end of a great deal, to be sure; but it is actually a commencement. Jesus ends many things but it does not end yes. If that first bandit's spirit survived death—and we believe it did — what kind of future would he have? If the second man's spirit survived — and Jesus assured him it would — what kind of future would he have? Luke tells the story; he leaves us to draw our own conclusions.

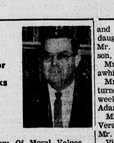
Pastor Speaks



Problem Of Moral Values

To whom can I speak today? The gentle man has perished The violent man has access to everybody.

The iniquity that smites the land It has no end.

There are no righteous men The earth is surrendered to criminals.

This sounds modern a every respect; for today the criminal elements in our world would take over! Yet according to Reader's Digest, the above lines were colned around four thousand years ago.

It's the conviction of every age that the old virtues are disappearing, the old values are disintergrating. "Honesty is the best policy" seems to be far back in the shadows.

Yet we have reason to believe that regeneration as well as decay continues in the world. We are continuously having birth as well as death. And with every new life comes a fresh beginning.

What we must learn is that we do not find truth by the announcement of it. We learn by the assimilation through attitudes and habits. Every generation achieves victories as well as defeats.

The same resources are open to us today as were open to those of the ancient past. If morality is on the decline, it is because people are not promoting it in life.

The Moral order is not something enshrined in historical documents, but engrained in every-day living. Every generation is only one step from disintergration, but likewise only one generation from re-creation.

Let's believe this and apply ourselves to the way of truth and right found in Christ. He is the only person who is the embodiment of truth and moral values. By relating to Him, we relate to moral values.

Change and decay

When all around I see,

Thou who changest now

Abide with Me.

The Christian Church, the Home, the School are the primary sources of the development of moral values. And they are in that order. Be faithful to the church of your choice.
